Arboretum hosts Traveler for Lunar New Year celebration

By Nathaniel A. Lopez
Superior Sun

On Sunday, Jan. 29, a crowd of people gathered at the Boyce Thompson Arboretum to help ring in the Lunar New Year – the Year of the Rabbit. Guests sat on benches and chairs in the picnic area, facing the stage waiting for the main event. The sound of Traveler’s hypnotic drums began to fill the air as the band started playing. The crowd sat entertained watching Traveler give an impressive performance of worldly music, playing various instruments. “We all play different instruments at some point,”

Scott Jeffers said in between songs, “We’re like a whole different band.” Guests were able to enjoy some beverages from the bar during the event. Traveler’s music covered a wide range of emotions and styles, even four cardinals perched themselves on the overhead trees to ring in the new year.

Traveler performs under the trees at the Boyce Thompson Arboretum over the weekend in celebration of the Lunar New Year.
