Exciting Life in the Compost Pile

By Laurie Bryant

Oracle Community Learning Garden

More and more gardeners are creating their own compost areas in their yards. It is such an effective amendment to the soil when growing plants! Many companies sell bags of compost in bulk, but we can create our own readily available source at home.

Why do we compost? Some good reasons are to help reduce landfill, cut down on wasted food, create a good amendment to our garden, and stay organic. And what makes a good compost? We basically need food scraps, other plant material, the right temperature, oxygen and water. It's the proper proportions of these that make a difference. We want to get good, usable compost in a reasonable amount of time without bad odors from addition of the wrong material. We could leave a pile of plant materials unattended without water, and it will eventually break down. But it takes a long time.

In addition to water, heat, air and organic materials, the most important part of composting is the diligent work of microbes, invertebrates, and crustaceans that live in our compost. We only see the big bugs, but it's a fascinating world once you're aware of what's going on in there. In a teaspoon of compost, you may find up to a billion bacteria, 440-900 feet of branching fungal, and 10,000 to 50,000 protozoa!

Here's a little view into the center of that compost pile. Let me introduce you to these hard workers without actually having to shake their hands. In fact, we can't even see most of them without a microscope.

The microbes are the primary consumers that start eating the food waste in the compost. These include bacteria, fungi, actinomycetes, and nematodes. Sowbugs are also primary consumers. Earthworms are a subject all their own, feasting on the microbes while eating the partially broken down food scraps, and doing a tremendous job in the garden. Their tunneling aerates the compost and enables water, nutrients and oxygen to filter down through the pile.

The next group are the secondary consumers, who continue to break down the material by eating the primary consumers. This group includes springtails, nematodes, protozoa, rotifers, some beetles and mites.

And finally the last group are the tertiary consumers, who eat the secondary consumers, continuing to process the decaying organic matter. These include centipedes, predatory mites, rover beetles and ants. It's really a complex food web in action and each stage breaks down that "black gold" a little more until its ready to make our vegetables grow and taste better.

The temperature of the compost pile is very important

COMPOST PILES

to how fast it works. This all happens with chemical reactions. But without being overwhelmed by the chemistry, we can understand what is happening inside that compost pile. You might want to purchase a long thermometer to insert in your pile to tell you what's going on in there and what stage your compost is in. Essential elements for microbes and invertebrates in compost are carbon, nitrogen, oxygen, and moisture. As the metabolic rate of microbes speeds up, the system temperature increases and the compost is "cooking". As the microbes reduce the organic material, oxygen is depleted and the temperature lowers. 130 degrees or more favors destruction of weed seeds, pathogens and fly larvae.

There are many styles of compost bins available, or you can make your own. Use a container with airholes, or even a pile with chicken wire around it. You just want to be able to turn it when it needs it.

Building and maintaining your compost:

- Start with a layer of "browns" for carbon: shredded twigs, leaves, paper, coffee grounds.
- Add "greens" for nitrogen: yard waste, food scraps.
- Add horse, cow, sheep or goat manure. But not too much because it really heats up. Chicken and bat guano is also good but small amounts only because these are very "hot".
- Water each layer.
- Avoid meat, milk, oil and pet droppings. These can smell bad and attract animals.

- Check your moisture content and heat. A long-stem thermometer is a good tool for your compost pile.
- Cover new food additions with soil without disturbing the center of the pile.
- When temperatures within a pile are high, let it be, but if they approach 150 you should turn it.
- When temperatures decrease, turn the pile to increase oxygen and start "cooking" again.
- Let your compost "rest", cool down and fully decompose before adding it to garden.

A small composting area is a fun way to use up vegetable scraps and make a wholesome addition to your garden soil. If your compost pile is really small, it might not heat up. Don't worry - just keep it moist and it will eventually break down. And be sure that your compost bin or pile is secure from explorations by the local wildlife!

Start small and Grow as you Go.

Tips and Tricks from Bunny - Another way to use those veggie scraps

I have a small garden at home with 6 grape vines on the north side. I take my vegetable kitchen scraps out every few days, dig a hole about 2 feet away from the vine, then cover the scraps with soil. I water it with a couple gallons of water I'd saved from shower warm-up water in a 5 gallon bucket, then mulch with straw and shredded paper. The grapes have exploded with growth! Currently I have dug, filled, and covered and mulched 8 holes.

Now I'm digging holes for veggie scraps in the garden bed in 4 spots next to a Large Cherry Tomato plant, watering it, then laying down straw mulch. The mulch adds to the water retention and keeps the roots cool. And next, I'll work on the small fig tree I grew from a cutting and planted in my garden.

Note: Be sure that your veggie scrap compost holes cannot be dug up by local wildlife - some kind of fencing around them and your plants is very important or your compost will be feeding the javelina and packrats.

Start small, one plant at a time and go from there. I like trying anything that will save me time, money and energy.

respond to situations like this, and luckily we have a strong village," said Acosta. Food, games, and raffles followed the recognition ceremony. Volunteers from the Oracle Community Center had various carnival-styled games set up to keep the youth entertained.

SaddleBrooke Rotary Club had a table set up, offering kids free books. The SaddleBrooke Rotary Club also donated two bicycles to be raffled off to two lucky winners. Oracle Firewise was in the kitchen serving up hotdog and watermelon plates to every person in attendance. Arizona Youth Partnership was there handing out water bottles and had a sack-toss activity. Dirty Sno was also at the celebration serving up cool and refreshing sweet treats. The Fourth of July celebration had a good turn out, and helped the community recognize a young person's heroic actions. After a rough Fourth of July in 2020, this event was good for bringing the community out and back together.

Wildfire Safety

Much of the southwest is considered a high-hazard fire environment. Within this hazardous environment are individual homes, and entire communities ill-prepared to survive an intense wildfire. It is not a question of "if" a wildfire will occur, but when. The odds of losing human life and property are growing. The Town of Kearny would like to protect you and the community from the dangers of wildfires. The Fire Chief is very concerned about this upcoming fire season. Even though we have received more rain than usual, it has caused more weeds. Once the rain stops, the weeds will dry out and this will make for a dangerous fire season. Please clear weeds, dry grass, dry shrubs or dead trees surrounding your property. Thank you for your support.

Shop at Home: Rancheros Carniceria

In April 2020, COVID-19 brought much of Arizona's economy to a screeching halt. All businesses not deemed "essential" were ordered closed by Arizona's governor Doug Ducey.

The lockdown continued for nearly two months. When Gov. Ducey finally gave the go ahead to reopen, businesses slowly began the road to recovery. Even those listed as "essential" had a challenge with this economic recovery.

Many small businesses and non-profits in Arizona didn't survive the lockdown. The businesses that did survive are hanging on as best they can. Copper Area News wanted to give something back to the local business community. Over the next several weeks, our newspapers (Copper Basin News, Superior Sun and San Manuel Miner) will be featuring local businesses and non-profits, encouraging our readers to Shop at Home, stay local and support our local businesses. To date, Copper Area News has featured 78 businesses in the Copper Corridor.

It is hard enough making it as a small business in a small town during normal times. But to balance those difficulties during a pandemic adds an entirely different twist to things.

Rancheros Carniceria served its customers the most essential thing during the pandemic – groceries. There are few places that sell fresh meat and vegetables between Winkelman and Oracle, Rancheros being one of them. The market remained open during the quarantine and remains open to serve the community.

They provide a place for people to peruse different cuts meat, fresh veggies and canned goods. With a large selection of beef, pork and chicken, in many varieties, you'll find just what you need.

Rancheros Carniceria is owned by Luis C. Lopez. He owns a second location in Catalina by the same name. He is also working on opening a third location in Tucson, AZ.

Rancheros has been providing fresh products to the community for seven years and counting. They are open daily from 9:00 to 7:00 pm. You can stop by Rancheros at 337 N. Hwy. 77, Mammoth. The store number is 520-487-0173.

"Thank you for being our customers," said Luis.

Next time you find yourself planning a meal but your ingredients' stick falls short, head over to Rancheros. They may just have what you need.
